Sarah Bruce grew up along the South River of the Chesapeake Bay near Annapolis Maryland. Growing up, her excitement for the environment and environmental education was fostered along the shores of the Chesapeake. Sarah studied Outdoor Recreation Management at Penn State, where she was able to find a future helping others to learn outside. During her time at university, Sarah was lucky enough to travel to Fiji, Costa Rica and South Africa to study sustainability, tourism, and park management. Sarah is interested in getting people to explore the world around them, through both long distance travel, and being immersed in new cultures, as well as rediscovering your own backyard.
