Nate Zantzing was born and raised in the temperate, deciduous forests of Southeastern Pennsylvania. Spending much of his youth exploring the woods and terrain, Nate quickly developed an appreciation for the wilds and their inhabitants. Throughout schooling, Nate remained intrigued by wildlife and the ever-important need for conservation. After competing in the Pennsylvania Envirothon, a science-based skills competition, Nate attended Prescott College in Prescott, Arizona to pursue an Environmental Studies degree. Nate is thrilled to be a part of the CVA program at Big Thicket National Preserve in Eastern Texas.
