Justice Brewer-Bryant is from East Atlanta, Georgia. He worked for the National Park Service as a YCC and as a SCA. He just graduated from the College of Coastal Georgia with a degree in Business Administration. When asked about working in the park service even though he has a business degree his response is "I grew up with the park service being a part of my family due to my sister, who is a Park Ranger. I always have a deep appreciation of the land and history around me, but I knew I did not want to be a scientist. Having a business degree allows me to be flexible and let me learn how I can help the park service." Right now, Justice is learning the ropes of being an effective leader, through volunteer coordination at George Washington Memorial Parkway in Washington, D.C.
