

Golden Gate National Recreation Area (CA)

Sydney Mentrup grew up in a small town outside of Cincinnati, Ohio. Since then she has lived across the country, studying and pursuing a career in environmental sustainability. She has worked in diverse areas from the sandy shores of Florida to the endless deserts of New Mexico. Currently, Sydney is working and living in San Francisco, at Golden Gate National Recreation Area, assisting in management of the natural areas. For her undergraduate degree, Sydney attended The University of Cincinnati and transferred to The University of New Mexico later in her career. She will graduate with her Bachelor's of Science in Biology in Spring 2019.

