

STONES RIVER NATIONAL BATTLEFIELD (TN)

Rachel Blackburn grew up moving all through the southeastern United States and is currently attending Middle Tennessee State University. She is majoring in art with a focus in museum studies and a minor in sociology. She has a background in biology and early childhood education. She has always been interested in working for the National Parks, but never imagined actually pursuing it. When Rachel was starting to look at internships, she got lucky and saw that Stones River National Battlefield had a position available for a volunteer internship as a museum and library assistant. Once she became familiar with the park and interned as a museum and library assistant, she was informed about the CVA program. She happily applied and was offered the internship for being Stones River National Battlefield's Community Volunteer Ambassador and cannot wait to learn any and everything about National Parks.