

GLEN CANYON NATIONAL RECREATION AREA (AZ)

Victoria grew up in Saint Paul, Minnesota. In attempts to escape the snowy winters, she attended college at Pacific Lutheran University in Tacoma, Washington. Her appreciation for backpacking and the National Park service first began when she conducted glacial research in the beautiful Mount Rainier National Park. After getting a B.S. in geoscience she worked as a summer camp backpacking guide in the northern Colorado Rockies. She also served in the SCA Massachusetts AmeriCorps teaching environmental education and maintaining trails in MA forests and parks. Her understanding of the outdoors and environmental stewardship flourished in these experiences -- she hopes to spread inspiration and education to others about the outdoors in her position at Glen Canyon National Recreation Area.
